Sonar should feel like signal, not warfare.

Use

- Waves
- Echoes
- Pulses
- Concentric rings
- Data currents
- Negative space
- One active signal point

Avoid

- Crosshairs
- Targeting reticles
- Weapons
- Submarines
- Military maps
- Robot faces
- Crypto/hacker clutter

Rule

Dark slides create atmosphere.
Light slides explain. Do not make every slide cinematic.

Sharp. Human. Bold without being loud.

We sound like

A smart operator who sees the pattern, tells the truth, and makes the next move obvious.

Confident
Concise
Commercial
Curious
Lightly irreverent

We do not sound like

AI-bro hustle. SDR outsourcing. Crypto cyberpunk.
Enterprise jargon soup.

No "crush."
No "dominate."
No "10x guaranteed."
No "army of agents."

Approved lines.

Find the signal. Move when it matters.

Stop working the whole ocean.

More activity is not more intelligence.

The market is already talking. Sonar tells you what matters.

Your CRM remembers the past. Sonar watches what is moving now.

Pipeline starts before the reply.

Say this. Not that.

Say

Signal-based GTM intelligence
Buying windows
Commercial relevance
Explainable prioritization
Human-guided agents
Move when timing matters

Avoid

AI SDRs
Guaranteed meetings
Fully autonomous sales
Replace your SDR team
Blast more leads
Unleash domination

What makes Sonar different.

Intelligence before outreach

We do not start with a list and ask how many messages to send. We ask what changed, what it means, and whether action is justified.

Buying windows, not leads

A lead fits a filter. A buying window combines fit, movement, timing, context, and value.

Explainable action

The system should always answer why this account, why this person, why now, and what happens next.

Less noise. More signal. Better timing.

That is the bar for every deck, page, post, proposal, and product surface.
